

LETTER OF SPONSORSHIP and AFFIDAVIT OF SUPPORT

Prospective students coming to Canada typically have various sources of funds to support their intended program in Canada. Most students are sponsored by parents, relatives, friends, employers while others sponsor themselves.

Proof of funds is a crucial eligibility requirement for a study permit application. Therefore, it is important to ensure that adequate information is provided to satisfy the immigration officer on your relationship with the sponsor and their ability to sponsor your education in Canada.

What information should be included in a sponsorship letter for a Canadian Study Permit?

A sponsorship letter should typically contain the following information;

- 1) Introduction of sponsor
- 2) Description of relationship of with the sponsor
- 3) Reason for sponsorship
- 4) Amount of Sponsorship funds and length of sponsorship
- 5) Source of Sponsorship funds. Bank statement of previous 4-6 months, Income tax certificate, salary slip or any other document which proof the financial stability of sponsor
- 6) Where the funds are currently held
- 7) Your expectations as a result of the sponsorship
- 8) Contact information and how your sponsor can be reached.

NOTE:

1. Anybody can choose to sponsor you but you stand a better chance with a 3rd party/company sponsorship when they have committed funds to your study as well as proven relationship to you. The sponsorship letters should tell visa officers where the funds is coming from and why they decided to sponsor you.
2. Funds to be filled in the application form should be for one year. You must also show means of funds for the second year if your program is more than a year. Also, if you are self-sponsored and have all the funds for the duration of your program (1or 2 years) you can fill the equivalent in the available funds section.
3. Endeavour to use an affidavit of sponsorship if you are using a 3rd party sponsorship. Relatives and family members are mostly reliable sponsors because there is some kind of blood connection and your overall academic pursuit will bring some advantage or pride to them when they sponsor you. The overall interest of a person willingly sponsoring you must somehow be seen in your application. People put their money where their heart or interest is.

4. Make sure you don't submit a statement of account that doesn't have traceable source(s) of accumulated funds. The 6 months SOA required by CIC is most LIKELY to quantify and ascertain how funds available were accumulated and if funds will be generated for subsequent year(s) once program is more than a year.

5. After your purpose of visit is in-check and convincing, the next most important thing is the funds for your study. You must convince officers that indeed, you will have the funds that you have declared. This is really IMPORTANT. People who get refused a study permit even when they have huge amount of funds to show didn't meet other requirement of a study permit and PURPOSE OF VISIT is usually and often time the main issue.

Finally, Choose programs and school you and your sponsor can afford. It is one thing to be admitted to a program and it is another to prove to Canadian immigration officers that you can meet the challenges of studying in Canada without a recourse to their government in whatsoever capacity. They want to make sure they discourage the idea of you working to fund your studies as they expect international students to invest funds in their economy while they make same economy very attractive to foreign students with good incentives. It's a give and take situation.
